This ordinarily small stream near the Appomattox River, along with other streams in the vicinity, went on the rampage as a result of heavy rainfall and melting snow during the weekend and resulted in a number of roads being closed and property damage.

Baptist Women's Day Held At Liberty Chapel

The Liberty Chapel Baptist Church had Baptist Women's Day at the church on Sunday, February 25th with the ladies of the church serving in all the capacities of the Sunday School and the Morning Worship service.

Mrs. Faye Morgan, Director of W.M.U., was in charge of the program. Mrs. Belle Reynolds and Miss Renee Williams served as organist and pianist. Mrs. Dorothy Harris directed the music and led the choir composed of the ladies of the church in singing a beautiful arrangement of "To God Be The Glory."

Mrs. Ethelyne Megginson gave the morning invocation and Mrs. Helen Williams made the church announcements, emphasizing those things printed in the program. Mrs. Beverly Booker read the scripture lesson, using Proverbs 31 as the reading of the day.

Mrs. Dorothy Jones, W.M.U. Director for the James River Association, gave the morning prayer and Mrs. Ann Reynolds led the church in the Responsive Reading on Mission Involvement. Mrs. Rosa Williams and Mrs. Ann Reynolds served as ushers for the morning service.

Mrs. Delores Cheatham introduced Miss Kathryn Bullard, guest speaker, who is the Executive Director for W.M.U. in the State of Virginia.

After an inspiring message by Miss Bullard, the congregation sang a hymn and was dismissed in prayer by Mrs. Rosa Williams. The congregation adjourned to a very delicious lunch that was prepared by the ladies of the church.

The Bible And Daily Living

By Dr. William L. Trimyer

CONCERN FOR YOUR CHURCH

Background Scripture:
I Cor. 1:1-19; II Cor. 1:21- 2:4; 13:1-14

"For I wrote to you out of much affliction and anguish of my heart and with many tears, not to cause you pain but to let you know the abundant love I have for you. (II Cor. 2:4)

The Church As a Family

The Church is ideally made up of a diverse mixture of people, who form a commitment together to minister to each other and to worship God. Although the church is a divine institution, the people who make up the church are broken and in need of healing. So the church is not a divine institution for saints, but a family of sinners who struggle together to find meaning and fellowship in Christ.

The local church family is an important institution, whether it be located in an urban setting, a small town, or in the rural countryside. The church is composed of flesh and blood people who form a fellowship of caring ministry. Members of a church fulfill their commitment through attendance, service and support. Members share in caring for the sick, ministering to the bereaved, helping the needy, supporting the troubled, and giving to local and world-wide missions. When they combine their resources and efforts, a church family can accomplish a great deal!

Paul wrote to the Corinthian church to declare God's expectations of the people. The Corinthian church was located in a city that majored in wrong, and Paul writes to express his concern for this struggling congregation.

Support Your Church!

Paul's concern for the Corinthian congregation should be every Christian's concern, namely, that their church be a priority in their life. If you choose to become a member of a church, it therefore follows that you are under obligation to support your church in every way possible.

Paul also hints at a far reaching implication of the broader fellowship of God's people. One wonders whether there will be any denominational differences in heaven! Denominations are appropriate vehicles for cooperative endeavors to fulfill the "Great Commission," but an attitude of denominationalism or separatism is contrary to the spirit of the New Testament. We are in this thing together, for better or for worse. We can make it better by acknowledging one another as brothers and sisters of the same Christ.

Paul's deep concern for the Corinthian church is further reflected in II Cor. 1:21-2:4, where Paul affirms the church as a real source of joy for him. Paul subtly reproves the Corinthian church by affirming their strengths. We can learn from Paul a sound psychological principle, namely, love and affirmation pave the way for judgment. Or, as someone once said, "He has a right to censor who has a heart to bless." In other words, criticism is more easily heard when spoken in love.

I used to have a paperboy who promptly delivered every morning at 5:30 a.m. After dropping off the paper he would spin around the parking lot just outside our house, which aroused everyone from their sleep. I met him one morning, having gotten up at five o'clock. Just as he finished spinning around the lot I came out from behind a bush and stopped him. I told him how much I appreciated his promptness in delivering the papers, but that the noise from the car spinning in the parking lot had to go. We saw eye to eye from then on.

A Letter of Hope

Paul ends his letter on a positive and hopeful note. Rather than lashing out and creating a potentially divisive situation, Paul shares with them that his authority for what he has to say comes from Christ. And Paul's authority is used in such a way as to build up and not destroy. So he urges the Corinthian Christians to struggle for unity and to live in peace together. In doing so, the love and peace of God would sustain them.

That's a hopeful message to any church or member involved in a conflict. When the chips are flying, a good church member will "Hang In There" with their support, working to bring about peace and unity for to leave and withdraw one's support is to become part of the problem rather than part of the answer.

Appomattox DECA — "A Winner"

Congratulations are in order to the ACHS DECA students that competed in competition Monday, February 26, 1979. Every student that participated was a winner even if they did not win in the contest. We are extremely proud of each and every one of you. In competition there can only be a few winners however, and ACHS had its share this year. Jeff Martin was the first place winner in Automotive and Petroleum. He also won first place in each of his competing events. Lisa Goin was also a first place winner in General Merchandising. Tony Martin received a second place award for "Student of the Year." Lois O'Brien received third place in General Merchandising. Also John Curran received third place in Food Service.

Some additional winners were Mike Childress, second place, Product and Service Technology, Linwood Elliott, 2nd place, Communications, Donna Gunter 3rd place in Management MO and Tony Martin 3rd place in Display. In addition ACHS was awarded a certificate for having 100% membership in both State and National DECA.
